Break-out Group #2: Bottom-Up Strategies for Integrated Recovery

Arrietta Chakos, Group Moderator
Darlene Sparks Washington, Scribe/Reporter

1. Who should be responsible for integrating disaster recovery?

2. What are the barriers to the integration of disaster recovery?

3. What are the next steps?
Who should be responsible for integrating disaster recovery?

- Existing social networks
  - No need to re-create structures already in place
    - School
    - Faith institutions
- Formal
  - Sports organizations
- Private sector
  - Service organizations (e.g. Boy Scouts)
  - Social service advocated
- Ad hoc groups: emerging social networks
- Distributed leadership
  - Determined by the community
- NDFR customized for community
  - Leveraging tools
    - Engaged professionals (leaders, advisors)
What are the barriers to the integration of disaster recovery?

- Motivation and desire
- Miscommunication
- Ready access to technical guidance aka community guide to resilience
- Language diversity
- Time/effort/complexity
- Finances
What are the next steps?

- Develop a compelling vision of robust community recovery.
- Customize the national frameworks
- Cultivate local engagement
- Leverage success stories
- Empower groups with drills
- Refine communications—language and messages
- Identify social network strategy
  - Social equity
  - Inclusion
  - Checks and balances